📍 RILCA Linguistics Program, Mahidol University

The Master of Arts in Linguistics program is designed to develop advanced linguistic skills. Students will acquire knowledge and practical experience in applying these skills in diverse linguistic and cultural contexts. Key areas of focus include educational development in multicultural societies, translation, research, and the creation of teaching materials. The program also incorporates the use of technology for both educational purposes and research, such as tools for language analysis and data processing, preparing students to work effectively in an interconnected global environment. Additionally, the program explores language within the context of communication to promote well-being in multicultural communities, while utilizing in-depth linguistic data to enhance the quality and effectiveness of educational resources.
